

'Arrest' of local leaders benefits MDA

Prominent Carroll County citizens were accused of "having a big heart for Jerry's kids."

They volunteered to be "arrested and serve time" in a mock jail at the Wabash & Erie Canal Center on March 21.

Everyone worked hard, calling friends and business associates to raise $13,957 in charitable contributions to benefit the local programs of the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The MDA Lock-Up, held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., was hosted by the Canal Center. Each participant was sentenced to "raise bail" by calling friends and encouraging contributions to advance MDA's lifesaving programs.

Several local businesses supported the community event, with "jailbird" transportation provided by the Carroll County Sheriff's Department and Lafayette Limo, and jailhouse food provided by the Landmark Restaurant and IGA.

More than 40 Carroll County area executives and civic leaders served their sentences "behind bars" for MDA. Among the bail raisers were Randy Toleman, Indiana Packers Corp.; Ron Francis, Carroll County Highway Dept.; Mark Frey, Singletree Transportation Inc.; and Andrea Miller, Carroll County Voter Registration.

MDA is a voluntary health agency working to defeat neuromuscular diseases through worldwide research, comprehensive services, and far-reaching professional and public health education. MDA maintains some 230 clinics nationwide, including ones at I.U., Methodist, and Riley Hospitals in Indianapolis. It also provides local support groups and a summer camp for kids with muscle-wasting diseases at Happy Hollow in Nashville, Ind.

MDA is the first nonprofit recognized by the American Medical Association with a Lifetime Achievement Award "for significant and lasting contributions to the health and welfare of humanity."

Anyone interested in planning or participating in an MDA event, or nominating someone to participate, can contact the local MDA office at (317) 824-4805.

FOCUS ON THE FAMILY

By Dr. James Dobson

Dr. Dobson

Motivated alcoholics can be successfully treated

QUESTION: You listed alcoholism as a marriage killer. My husband has that problem. It has created a great deal of pain in our home, and I am concerned about the emotional welfare of my children. Can it be treated, and is there hope for families like mine?

DR. DOBSON: Alcoholism is a devastating disease, not only for the person who has it, but for his or her entire family. Research shows that 40 percent of people living in Western nations have a close family member who is an alcoholic. That incidence is even higher in Russia and other countries of Eastern Europe. There is no way to calculate the impact of this problem on children, on spouses, and on the culture itself. Fortunately, it can be treated successfully for those who are willing to seek that help.

A few years ago I discussed the issue of alcoholism with a panel of knowledgeable people on the Focus on the Family radio broadcast. Included were Dr. Keith Simpson, a physician who has treated this problem for 20 years, and Jerry Butler, a marriage and family therapist with 25 years of counseling experience. His own father had committed suicide during one of his drunken binges. Also with me were "Bob," a recovered alcoholic, and his wife, "Pauline," who preferred that we withhold their real names.

I did not ask these four individuals for a detailed analysis of alcoholism; our listeners already knew how serious it is. Rather, I wanted them to provide us with practical suggestions as to how family members can recognize the disease and then be of help to those they love. The answers they gave were most encouraging and enlightening.

Dr. Simpson was asked whether alcoholism can be treated successfully today. Is it a hopeless condition, or is there a way out for the victim and his family? This was his reply:

"I specialized in the field of internal medicine for many years, but found it to be depressing work. I could help my patients with chronic lung disease and severe diabetes and heart disease, but in reality, my efforts were just a delaying action. Over time, conditions worsened and the diseases progressed. I made my rounds in intensive care each day and watched people losing their battle for life, whereas my alcoholic patients were getting well.

"That's why I deal almost exclusively with alcoholics now, and I find it to be extremely rewarding work. I see people who come in with more horrible problems than you can imagine, but they get into a recovery program, and in a few months the difference is like going from night to day. So yes, not only is alcoholism treatable, but the medical community does better with this disorder than any other chronic disease. Alcoholics emerge from treatment programs more functionally integrated, more capable and more effective than before they 'caught' the disease."

That was the theme of the entire discussion: There is hope for the alcoholic! But before recovery can begin, the problem has to be acknowledged and treatment sought. That applies to your own family situation, I'm sure. Your husband can be helped if he has "the want to."

QUESTION: I've been aware of my husband's unfaithfulness for some time now. I've taken him to task for it, which has resulted in some incredible, horrible battles. I have even made demands that he stop his infidelity, yet no changes in his attitude and behavior have happened. What am I doing wrong?

DR. DOBSON: I'm afraid you've made the common mistake of misunderstanding the difference between expressions of anger and loving toughness. Simply becoming angry and throwing temper tantrums is no more effective with a spouse than it is with a rebellious teenager. Screaming, accusing and berating are rarely successful in changing the behavior of human beings of any age. What is required is a course of action - an ultimatum that demands a specific response and results in a consequence. Then you must have the courage to deliver on the promise.
