

INDOT provides funding for safer school routes

Comet staff report

Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT) is asking schools and communities to propose projects and activities that make walking and biking to school safe, simple and enjoyable for Indiana school children.

This is the second year Safe Routes to School (SRTS) funding will be available to local communities. INDOT's aim is to make bicycling and walking to school safe and routine for students in grades kindergarten through eight.

The federally-funded program recognizes traffic congestion, fuel consumption and air pollution near schools, coupled with growing health and childhood obesity concerns, makes walking and biking to school an attractive low-cost way for getting to and from school.

This year INDOT will award about $1.8 million in federal money to support projects that best meet the goals of SRTS.

School principals, school district officials, local transportation agencies and metropolitan planning organizations are encouraged to work together and think about ways to promote walking and biking to school.

Eligible project examples include new sidewalks and crosswalks, speed reduction improvements and educational activities to teach children how to bike and walk to school safely.

Applications for the SRTS program were available on INDOT's Web site, www.ai.org/dot/, as of May 1. Applications will be accepted until June 29.

Indiana Safe Routes to School

Advisory Committee will review the applications this summer, and INDOT will announce the awards this fall.

Spring brings threat of tick-transmitted diseases

Comet staff report

Warm weather season means more Hoosiers will head outdoors and it could mean they may encounter disease-carrying ticks.

State health officials advise Hoosiers to take precautions when they plan outdoor activities in order to avoid contact with ticks. These tiny pests, may carry Lyme disease, Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, or Ehrlichiosis.

"Once the weather warms up, ticks get active," said James Howell, D.V.M., veterinary epidemiologist, Indiana State Department of Health. "Ticks, like mosquitoes, are carriers of a number of diseases."

"Not all ticks are infected and capable of transmitting illnesses, but all should be considered infectious and capable of transmitting disease."

During the last five-year period, Indiana has averaged 27 cases of Lyme Disease, three cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, and 2.8 cases of Ehrlichiosis yearly. All cases were from disease reports and confirmed said Howell.

Howell said exposure to tick-borne illnesses can be avoided, if people follow a few precautions.

"We know that in order to become ill, a person has to be bitten by an infected tick, and that means a tick must be able to reach exposed skin," Howell said. "A little care can prevent that from happening."

Health officials recommend that if individuals plan to enter a grassy or wooded area, where ticks are often present, the best way to prevent tick-transmitted diseases is to wear a long-sleeved shirt and light-colored pants, with the shirt tucked in at the waist and the pants tucked into socks. The use of repellents provides even more protection.

Insect repellents containing

DEET or picaridin can be sprayed on both skin and clothing to repel ticks and other insects. People who expect to be exposed to tick habitat for extended periods of time should use products containing permethrin on their clothing. Permethrin is an insecticide that kills ticks and other insects on contact.

Howell recommends that after leaving a grassy or wooded area, people should check for ticks on clothing and skin.

Ticks need to be attached from several hours to a couple of days before they can infect an individual.

"If a tick is attached to your skin, it can be removed with either tweezers or forceps by grasping the tick as close to the skin as possible," Howell said. "Ticks should not be removed with your bare fingers, but if tweezers or forceps are not available, you can use tissue paper or a paper towel to prevent the passing of any possible infection."

Lyme disease symptoms include a persistent, slowly expanding blotchy red rash that is paler at the center than at the edges. Other symptoms include joint pain or swelling, especially in the knees; fatigue; difficulty in concentrating; headache; stiff neck or weakness of the facial muscles; dizziness; and an irregular heartbeat.

The symptoms of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever and Ehrlichiosis are similar. They include a moderate-to-high fever, coupled with fatigue; muscle aches and pains; severe headaches; and chills. A rash also develops, which usually first appears on the arms, legs, palms of the hand and soles of the feet before spreading to other parts of the body.

If these diseases are diagnosed promptly, all three can be successfully treated with antibiotics.
