

Meadows wins national award

Comet staff report

Allison Meadows of Lafayette, formerly of Flora, a member of the North Central Advertising Federation (NCAdFed), was honored recently as the national president of the year by the American Advertising Federation (AAF). The Lafayette club was also named the 2007 National Club of the Year for clubs with membership of under 100 people.

Meadows

tenure as president, she helped the club reinvent itself under a new name. The club was previously known as the Greater Lafayette Association of Advertising and Marketing Professionals.

The club entered eight AAF categories, winning first in programming, advertising, education, membership and club management, and third in government relations and public service.

Meadows is director of marketing and admissions at Mulberry Health & Retirement Community. She also writes a weekly cooking column that appears in the Comet.

Area IV receives funding for community services programs

Comet staff report

Area IV Agency on Aging and Community Services Inc., has received a Community Service Block Grant (CSBG) to fund community services and activities. The services address issues such as employment, education, housing, self-sufficiency, nutrition, health, and emergency services.

man. "This is just one of many ways we are working with local officials to improve the quality of life and the economic opportunity for all citizens and communities throughout Indiana."

Nearly $2 million in additional funding for community services program were awarded to 24 community action groups serving all 92 Indiana counties by the Indiana Housing and Community Development Authority.

Area IV serves Carroll, Clinton, Tippecanoe and White counties.

An expansive work of art

Students from Sara Brosman's Tuesday Afternoon Drawing Studio at the Delphi Public Library created a sense of distance and perspective during their last four weeks of class when they collaborated on a mural depicting the library at the turn-of-the-century. Students began the class last fall by drawing portraits and still lifes. As the weather warmed they moved outdoors to learn how to draw buildings and trees. Wanting to pull all of the techniques together for a meaningful experience for the students, Brosman led the class to think in terms of creating a cohesive composition mural. Done in ink, classmates worked to decide what period the piece would represent and what would be included in the foreground, middle ground and background to give it depth. After the show's opening May 16, the mural will remain on display in the Gerber Globe-Valve Room of the library. The final destination of the piece after the exhibit concludes has yet to be decided.
