Is it time to prune?

By Paul Marcellino

In addition to being a pastor, I serve as an extension educator for Carroll County and spend a lot of time in training to be more effective. Recently, along with fellow educators, I spent some time walking the Purdue campus learning about plant diseases, tree planting, and pruning. The horticulture specialist felt it was an even trade if we would do some pruning for them around the Daniels Turf Center for the knowledge we gained. In the hot sun, 20 educators equipped with shears, loppers, and saws did some aggressive pruning.

times the Father has to prune away parts of our lives that are not like Jesus. He wants to form and shape us in His Son's image. He wants to shear away bad attitudes, pride, and self-reliance. His hope is that we will abide in him and, through his strength, produce much fruit. As we accept this Jesus teaches about the vine and the branches. In verses 1-2 it states, "I am the true vine, and my Father is the gardener. He cuts off every branch in me that bears no fruit, while every branch that does bear fruit he prunes so that it will be even more fruitful." Jesus is telling us two things in these verses. First, he tells us it is vital to stay connected to Him, the true vine, in order to produce fruit. Any good gardener knows that a branch apart from the life-giving vine not only cannot bear any type of fruit, but its survival is in jeopardy. Jesus made it a point to let us know that separation from Him and his body, the church, puts a believer in dire and often deadly circumstances.

This event reminded me of the verses in John 15 in which Jesus teaches about the vine and the branches. In verses 1-2 it states, "I am the true vine, and my Father is the gardener. He cuts off every branch in me that bears no fruit, while every branch that does bear fruit he prunes so that it will be even more fruitful." Jesus is telling us two things in these verses. First, he tells us it is vital to stay connected to Him, the true vine, in order to produce fruit. Any good gardener knows that a branch apart from the life-giving vine not only cannot bear any type of fruit, but its survival is in jeopardy. Jesus made it a point to let us know that separation from Him and his body, the church, puts a believer in dire and often deadly circumstances.

Secondly, Jesus talks about a type of pruning that will increase our fruit. Tuesday, we cut away weak branches and shaped the trees to be more productive.

There are times in our lives when we will receive disciplining or challenges that will have a pruning effect on us. Sometimes the Father has to prune away parts of our lives that are not like Jesus. He wants to form and shape us in His Son's image. He wants to shear away bad attitudes, pride, and self-reliance. His hope is that we will abide in him and, through his strength, produce much fruit. As we accept this Jesus teaches about the vine and the branches. In verses 1-2 it states, "I am the true vine, and my Father is the gardener. He cuts off every branch in me that bears no fruit, while every branch that does bear fruit he prunes so that it will be even more fruitful." Jesus is telling us two things in these verses. First, he tells us it is vital to stay connected to Him, the true vine, in order to produce fruit. Any good gardener knows that a branch apart from the life-giving vine not only cannot bear any type of fruit, but its survival is in jeopardy. Jesus made it a point to let us know that separation from Him and his body, the church, puts a believer in dire and often deadly circumstances.

Unfortunately, a few branches were dead in the trees that we pruned. Cutting the dead wood out of those trees did give me a sense of loss. This loss we see many times in our society today. So many people live fruitless lives unattached to the vital love of Christ. This is why we as the branches need to bear fruit so others will want to be part of the Living Vine and not become discarded as dead wood.

The next time you pick up your pruning shears, think of the gardener and the vine and realize that pruning may be difficult, but the resulting fruit beautiful.

Paul Marcellino is pastor at Camden First Baptist Church.

Mission team from Hickory Grove Church is going to Haiti

Comet staff report

Eight people from the Hickory Grove Church will be going on a work trip to Cazale, Haiti, Jan. 28-Feb. 4. They will be assisting the Zachary missionary family there who operate "Real Hope for Haiti." The Zacharys operate a rescue center that houses a maximum of 65 children, and a clinic where people come for medical treatment.

Some of the projects the team is working toward doing are repairing a town's cistern ($5,000), running a portable steel drinking water line across a river ($2,500), room addition for a laboratory ($2,000), as well as conducting a daily Bible School with the children.

The group will be doing fundraisers to help pay for the projects they will be doing there.

"Thank you to churches that have partnered with us in collecting peanut butter these past months," said Pastor Ken Smith.

Anyone who would like to help financially with these projects or would like a member of the group to come and share about the mission trip to Haiti with churches or other organization, call the church at 574-965-2731 or Pastor Smith at 574-826-4307. # FOCUS ON THE FAMILY

By Dr. James Dobson

Too often age sole factor in determining start of school

QUESTION: If age is such a poor factor to use in determining the start of the first grade, why is it applied so universally in our country?

Dr. Dobson

DR. DOBSON: Because it is so convenient. Parents can plan for the definite beginning of school when their child turns 6. School officials can survey their districts and know how many first-graders they will have the following year. If an 8-year-old moves into the district in October, the administrator knows the child belongs in second grade, and so on. The use of chronological age as a criterion for school entrance is great for everybody — except the late bloomer who is developmentally unprepared for formal education.

QUESTION: I'm convinced that I should stay home with my preschoolers if finances and temperaments permit. But what about after they are off to school? Do you still feel it is important to have Mom at home in the teen years?

DR. DOBSON: Many will not agree with my opinion on this subject, but it is born of experience with thousands of families. All things being equal, I believe Mom is still needed at home as the kids grow. Why? Because the heavy demands of child rearing do not slacken with the passage of time.

In reality, the teen years generate as much pressure on the parents as any other era. An adolescent turns a house upside down — literally and figuratively. Not only is the typical rebellion of those years a stressful experience, but the chauffeuring, supervising, cooking and cleaning required to support a teenager can be exhausting. Someone within the family must reserve the time and energy to cope with those new challenges. Mom is the candidate of choice.

Remember, too, that menopause and a man's mid-life crisis are scheduled to coincide with adolescence, which can make a wicked soup! It is a wise mother who doesn't exhaust herself at a time when so much is going on at home.

Let me illustrate why moms are needed at home during the teen years. A good military general will never commit all his troops to combat at the same time. He maintains a reserve army that can relieve the exhausted soldiers when they falter on the front line. I wish parents of adolescents would implement the same strategy. Instead, they commit every moment of their time to the business of living, holding nothing back for the challenge of the century. It is a classic mistake that can be even more difficult for parents of strong-willed adolescents.

This is my point: A woman in this situation has thrown all her troops into front-line combat. There is no reserve on which to call. In that fatigued condition, the routine stresses of raising an adolescent can be overwhelming.

Let me say it again: Raising boisterous teenagers is an exciting and rewarding experience but also a frustrating one at times. Their radical highs and lows affect our moods. The noise, the messes, the complaints, the arguments, the sibling rivalry, the missed curfews, the paced floors, the wrecked car, the failed test, the jilted lover, the wrong friends, the busy telephone, the pizza on the carpet, the ripped new blouse, the rebellion, the slammed doors, the mean words, the tears — it's enough to drive a rested mother crazy.

But what about our career woman who already "gave at the office," then comes home to this chaos? Any unexpected crisis or even a minor irritant can set off a torrent of emotion. There is no reserve on which to draw. In short, the parents of adolescents should save some energy with which to cope with aggravation!

Whether or not you agree with my advice at this point is your business. It is my responsibility simply to offer it. Generally speaking, the working mother has a challenging task before her. Admittedly, many women are able to maintain a busy career and keep the home fires burning, some with the assistance of involved husbands or domestic help. Other low-energy mothers with unhelpful husbands don't cope so well. Each family must decide for itself how best to deal with life's pressure points and opportunities.
