The closing of the Camden branch of Salin Bank and Trust Company will end a long banking tradition at that location.

The Camden Bank, a private bank, was organized in 1870. The bank received a charter as a state bank in 1919.

The Salin family purchased the bank in 1986. The name was changed to Salin Bank and Trust.

The bank at the Camden location is closing because most of those who originally opened accounts at Camden are now banking at other Salin branches.

There are no immediate plans for the building. Salin has offered to give the building to the Town of Camden, with certain stipulations, but an agreement has not been reached.

When the bank closes, Camden will be without its own bank for the first time in 128 years.

Sandy Johnson, owner of Sandy's Castle in Flora, has announced a "Going Out of Business" starting immediately.

The shop, on the corner of Main and Center streets, was opened by Johnson 12 years ago.

Carroll County's only other shop exclusively for small children was closed in Delphi last year.

Jim Payne, owner of Payne's Pharmacy, explained that the entire store will be remerchandised with an expanding card and gift section, as well as larger drug, cosmetic, health and beauty aid areas, with the expansion already underway.

The familiar musical "number please" of the Delphi telephone girls may give way to modern progress if plans to convert to a dial system, now in progress, are completed. Public service commission approval must be secured and details worked out and these are expected to be completed soon. Installation of the service will take about a year.

It's taxpaying time again, and a good many Carroll county folks chose Monday as the day to check in with the county tax office. County Treasurer Robert Ferrier reports that the total tax receipts for April 7 amounted to $19,937.51. Even tax expert Ferrier was impressed with this sizable amount. To quote Mr. Ferrier, "It was an outstanding day!"

It is doubtful if there is another city in the state no larger than Delphi where you can find three all night garages, two cafes and one hotel ready to serve the public twenty-four hours daily. That's what Delphi has at this time and the tourists heading for the lakes and Tippecanoe River points northwest of this city are going to be taken care of at all greatly reduced rates than formerly.

FOCUS ON THE FAMILY

By Dr. James Dobson

Hyperactive children can be managed through consistency

QUESTION: It's no secret that hyperactive children are difficult to handle at times. How, then, is such a child to be managed?

DR. DOBSON: Let me share a list of 18 suggestions that were provided in a book by Dr. Domeena Renshaw entitled "The Hyperactive Child." Though her book is now out of print, Dr. Renshaw's advice on this problem is still valid.

1. Be consistent in rules and disciplines.

2. Keep your own voice quiet and slow. Anger is normal. Anger can be controlled. Anger does not mean you do not love a child.

3. Try hard to keep your emotions cool by bracing for expectable turmoil. Recognize and respond to any positive behavior, however small. If you search for good things, you will find a few.

4. Avoid a ceaselessly negative approach: "Stop" - "Don't" - "No."

5. Separate behavior which you may not like, from the child's person, which you like, e.g., "I like you. I don't like your tracking mud through the house."

6. Have a very clear routine for this child. Construct a timetable for waking, eating, play, TV, study, chores, and bedtime. Follow it flexibly although he disrupts it. Slowly your structure will reassure him until he develops his own.

7. Demonstrate new or difficult tasks, using action accompanied by short, clear, quiet explanations. Repeat the demonstration until learned. This uses audiovisual-sensory perceptions to reinforce the learning. The memory traces of a hyperactive child take longer to form. Be patient and repeat.

8. Designate a separate room or a part of a room which is his own special area. Avoid brilliant colors or complex patterns in decor. Simplicity, solid colors, minimal clutter, and a worktable facing a blank wall away from distractions assist concentration. A hyperactive child cannot "filter" out over-stimulation himself yet.

9. Do one thing at a time: give him one toy from a closed box; clear the table of everything else when coloring; turn off the radio/TV when he is doing homework. Multiple stimuli prevent his concentration from focusing on his primary task.

10. Give him responsibility, which is essential for growth. The task should be within his capacity, although the assignment may need much supervision. Acceptance and recognition of his efforts (even when imperfect) should not be forgotten.

11. Read his pre-explosive warning signals. Quietly intervene to avoid explosions by distracting him or discussing the conflict calmly. Removal from the battle zone to the sanctuary of his room for a few minutes is useful.

12. Restrict playmates to one or at most two at one time, because he is so excitable. Your home is more suitable, so you can provide structure and supervision. Explain your rules to the playmate and briefly tell the other parent your reasons.

Pray for our nation to seek God

When you pass through the waters I will be with you; and through the rivers, they shall not overwhelm you; when you walk through fire you shall not be burned, and the flame shall not consume you. Isaiah 43:2 Pd. Adv.

13. Do not pity, tease, be frightened by, or overindulge this child. He has a special condition of the nervous system which is manageable.

14. Know the name and dose of his medication. Give these regularly. Watch and remember the effects to report back to your physician.

15. Openly discuss any fears you have about the use of medications with your physician.

16. Lock up all medications, including these, to avoid accidental misuse.

17. Always supervise the taking of medication, even if it is routine over a long period of years. Responsibility remains with the parents! One day's supply at a time can be put in a regular place and checked routinely as he becomes older and more self-reliant.

18. Share your successful "helps" with his teacher. The outlined ways to help your hyperactive child are as important to him as diet and insulin are to a diabetic child.

A reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R.D. Voorhees by the Junior class of the Flora high school in honor of the Seniors. It was the most elaborate and up-to-date ever given in this city. Music was rendered by the Misses Gladys Voorhees, Dollis Moss and Charles Steckel. Supper was served in six courses during which Miss Beth Sines furnished music on the piano. After supper toasts were read and enjoyed. All departed saying they had been royally entertained.
