Risk taking mission and service

By Micah Hudson

What do we know about "Mission and Service?" Many of us would define "mission" as inviting someone to church, being nice to someone that has been mean to us, or maybe even helping at a soup kitchen. Many of us would define "service" as opening the door for a stranger, returning an item to the rightful owner, or making a meal for someone who is sick or homebound. These definitions are okay and they are needed. Yet, these definitions do not require a high level of "risk."

When was the last time that you took a "risk" in "mission and service." Some things that I would put into this category that would require "risk" would be visiting a different culture with a new language while trying to live and explain the love of Jesus. It is one thing to explain the Bible and your faith to those who understand; yet it is quite different to do those things with people who understand a different language. Another "risk" would be adopting a child. I can only imagine the risk it would take to incorporate a child into your life, not just for the short term, but for their whole life. Another "risk" would be serving those in a different race or ethnic community where you no longer feel safe. Like fixing up a home in a rundown neighborhood, or walking the streets of big city at night to find a missing child.

In the Old Testament, Nehemiah took a huge "risk" in asking the King of Persia if he could return to Jerusalem to rebuild the city walls which had been destroyed and laid in ruins for many years. He risked his wealth (working for the king), his position (as a cupbearer), and his life to make a difference in rebuilding Jerusalem's walls and piecing together a huge part of the Jewish faith and heritage. How many of us would be willing to risk our job, our position, and our convenient life in order to help rebuild the wall of a city (that would have been hard work)? I would guess, not many.

Many of us would declare that we have NOT taken much "risk" when it comes to "mission and service." And you are probably wondering right now, what are some things in Carroll County that I could do that require more "risk." Well, you could adopt a child in your home or through a sponsorship program like Compassion Int. or World Vision. You could lend your time to help build the next Habitat home in our community. You could be a mentor to a child through our schools or one of our churches (look for opportunities this fall). Find an activity that takes you out of your own church or home and makes you uncomfortable. Now, that is taking a "Risk."

Nehemiah risked everything that he knew and understood in order to rebuild the walls of the city of Jerusalem. The thought of the Jerusalem walls torn down made him sad to the point of tears, caused him to pray for direction and help from God, and ultimately to asking the king for permission to leave. What issues or injustices do you see in our world, in our country, in our state, or in our county that make you weep and cause you to pray? If nothing comes to mind, then you have been playing too safe. If a few things come to mind, begin to pray for the courage to take "action" in one area that God would help you. If enough of us begin to act out our faith in our community, then the "risk" would not seem as great as we act together. May God help us to do "risk taking mission and service" together!

FOCUS ON THE FAMILY

By Dr. James Dobson

Fathers should create experiences with sons early on

QUESTION: As a father, what should I be trying to accomplish with my son in these teen years?

DR. DOBSON: Someone has said, "Link a boy to the right man and he seldom goes wrong." I believe that is true. If a dad and his son can develop hobbies together or other common interest, the rebellious years can pass in relative tranquility. What they experience may be remembered for a lifetime.

I recall a song, written by Dan Fogelberg, which told about a father who shared his love of music with his son. It is called "Leader of the Band," and its message touches something deep within me. The son talks of a father who "earned his love through discipline, a thundering, velvet hand." The father's "song is in my soul." The son himself has become a "living legacy to the leader of the band."

Can't you see this man going to visit his aged father today, with a lifetime of love passing between them? That must have been what God had in mind when he gave dads to boys.

Let me address your question directly: what common ground are you cultivating with your impressionable son? Some fathers build or repair cars with them; some construct small models or make things in a woodshop. My dad and I hunted and fished together. There is no way to describe what those days meant to me as we entered the woods in the early hours of the morning. How could I get angry at this man who took time to be with me? We had wonderful talks while coming home from a day of laughter and fun in the country. I tried to maintain that kind of contact with my son.

Opportunities to communicate openly and build the father-son relationship have to be created. It's a goal that's worth whatever it takes to achieve.

QUESTION: When do children begin to develop a sexual nature? Does this occur suddenly during puberty?

DR. DOBSON: No, it occurs long before puberty. Perhaps the most important concept suggested by Freud was his observation that children are not asexual. He stated that sexual gratification begins in the cradle and is first associated with feeding. Behavior during childhood is influenced considerably by sexual curiosity and interest, although the happy hormones do not take full charge until early adolescence. Thus, it is not uncommon for a four-year-old to be interested in nudity and the sexual apparatus of the opposite sex. The elementary school years are an important time in the forming of sexual attitudes. Parents should be careful not to express shock and disgust over this kind of curiosity, even though they have to disapprove of exploratory behavior. It is believed that many sexual problems begin as a result of inappropriate training during

QUESTION: You have described the nature of willfully defiant behavior and how parents should handle it. But does all unpleasant behavior result from rebellion and disobedience?

DR. DOBSON: No. Defiance can be very different in origin from the "challenging" response I've been describing. A child's negativism may be caused by frustration, disappointment, fatigue, illness, or rejection, and therefore must be interpreted as a warning signal to be heeded. Perhaps the toughest task in parenthood is to recognize the difference between these behavioral messages. A child's resistant behavior always contains a message to his parents, which they must decode before responding.

For example, a disobedient youngster may be saying, "I feel unloved now that I'm stuck with that screamin' baby brother. Mom used to care for me; now nobody wants me. I hate everybody." When this kind of message underlies the defiance, the parents should move quickly to pacify its cause. The art of good parenthood, then, revolves around the interpretation of behavior.
