TLHS to present Beauty and the Beast

Comet staff report

Twin Lakes High School Theatre and Music departments will present their spring musical, Disney's Beauty and the Beast this weekend, March 12 and 13 at 7:30 p.m., and March 14 at 2 p.m. in the TLHS auditorium.

Beauty and the Beast is the magical tale of Belle and the Beast (Hannah Holmes and Nick Brietic). Belle is a young beauty who tires of life in her small town and dreams of adventure and romance. The Beast is in reality a Prince who was transformed by an Enchantress (Rachel Woolley) when he offended her with his arrogance and cold heart. When Belle's inventor father, Maurice (Riley Dedaker) gets lost in the forest, he and Belle both end up captives in the Beast's castle. Belle persuades the Beast to let Maurice go by promising to stay in his stead. Little does she know that the castle is filled with enchanted creatures - humans who have been turned into objects by the Enchantress's spell. The only way the spell can be broken is if their master learns to love and be loved in return.

Tickets are $6 for reserved seating and $7 for premium reserved seating. Tickets may be obtained from DiAnn Adams in the TLHS guidance office, (574) 583-7108, ext. 2326.

College students' project advances to international level

Comet staff report

Robin Guise of Flora, a junior at Indiana State University, participated in a team that won a regional interior design competition and will now advance to international competition.

The team was one of three finalists in the Interior Design Educators Council (IDEC) Midwest Student Design Competition.

Guise worked on the project with Bridget Lindauer of Ferdinand and Robyn Otter of Rising Sun.

The project is a library design incorporating technology and universal design. It was done as course work, and the students had only two weeks to complete the assignment.

The international level of the IDEC competition is in Atlanta, with Interior Design programs from across the nation competing. Winners will be announced at the 2010 IDEC Annual Conference on March 27.

Carroll spring play

Carroll Drama Club will present "The Musical Comedy Murders of 1940" on March 12 and 13 at 7 p.m. and on March 14 at 2 p.m. The play (not a musical) is a murder mystery comedy set in a secluded mansion. The creative team of a new Broadway show has gathered for an audition, not realizing that the evening has been planned as a setup to catch the "Stage Door Slasher." Eddie McKuen (Jake Walker) and Nikki Crandall (Hannah Reinke) try to solve the mystery. Who is the slasher? Is it the director? The Producer? The Composer? The Tenor? Played along the lines of "Clue," with plot twists and mistaken identities, this is a funny play that will keep the audience guessing till the end. Pictured l-r are Hannah Reinke, Brian Bordner, Elise Walker, Jake Walker, Jared Collins, Shelby Spray, Molly Jewell, Jordan Hendershot. Director is Noel Pinkard. Photo provided
